4. Understanding Command Functions for Firefighting and Emergency Operations All day, No Class limit

In the rural volunteer fire service, it is always questionable who may show up for any given incident. It is important that all firefighters have a strong understanding or are capable of making initial decisions, account for all personnel, and manage the incident. This class is a next step progression for firefighters that may fill the role as a Company Officer or Incident Commander. Objectives to be covered will include: Scene size-ups, initial strategies and tactics (RECEO-VS and SLICERS), needed staffing, water supply, need for outside resources and agencies, rehab plans, and ICS applications to improve accountability and resource management. This will be an interactive learning opportunity to implement new ideas and review traditional incident response in your departments.
